CURTIS APPEALS FOR HEAVY VOTE

By United Press
Secretary of State George H. Curtis has issued an appeal today to Idaho voters to get out and vote Nov. 3 on the "really great issues at stake."

He spoke in behalf of Owen Thomas, Democratic senatorial candidate. He said Taylor was "a man able to move with the times."

He charged that Gen. John Thomas "plays the role of a cloakroom strategist" who "plays politics during a national emergency."

Thomas, recently publicized his "island," by announcing that "whenever I can, if such a course contributes to victory, I will support the administration."

The qualification suggests that Thomas is one to determine whether it contributes to a victory and his determination thus far have been petty and political.

Senator Thomas opened his final week of his campaign by saying "the hood on his record," adding that "the voters of Idaho have reason to be certain of any position on war and post-war problems."

He summarized his record as follows:

Voiced in 1940 and 1941 for all appropriations and measures designed to strengthen defense of the United States.

Supported administration measures for mobilization of military and industrial resources to hasten winning of the war.

Favored all measures for advancement of the welfare of agriculture.

Participated in framing and enactment of laws controlling wages and costs.

Voiced for reduction in expenditures for non-war purposes.

Resisted efforts to lower tariff duties.

Given special attention to development of western resources.

Proponents of the senatorial election have been voicing their views in the opinion of Lewis Williams, state director of Democratic institutions.

"The Democrats will help us," said Williams, "why shouldn't we help them?"

Williams has been a "life-long Democrat."

The so-called isolationist stand of Ben. Thomas and Rep. Henry Dworshak, both Republicans, was upheld by State Senator W. Scott Hall of Malad, G. O. P. leader.

He said that "good men should be pilloried through public opinion while their hands are tied and their tongues are silenced by the emergency of the present crisis and the demands of public duty."

"The truth is 90 per cent of the people of Idaho and the nation did not want war," he said.

"I had to swim through plenty of sharks in the lagoon and I am sure that the voters of Idaho will back me up."

A means of overcoming Idaho's isolationist stand is the "first thing on his docket," it is charged by C. A. Dettlerson, Republican candidate, said in a speech at Pocatello.

He said the word "isolationist" is a word of scorn to the program. He continued to deny the charges of his opponent, Gov. Chase A. Clark, that a deficit of a million and one-half dollars existed in the general fund when he left office.

He said the deficit was a bookkeeping error only, because the money to absorb the warrentals had been earmarked long before Clark thought of running for governor.

Grim War Hand Sweeps Romance From South Sea Isle Paradises

By BETTA MACDONALD
(Navy Service)
HONOLULU—And so, regrettably, we take our leave of Goo-Goo as the rays of the setting sun illuminate the palm-fringed beach of this island paradise.

That buxom female to travelogue movie of south sea islands was over, big in pre-war days, but it had no place in the thoughts of the "island natives." Instead of regretfully looking back at the "island natives," they look forward to landing in Hawaii, to seeing a paved street and finding some noisy entertainment.

Prepare for Trouble

The boys who are turning a lot of these islands into a grim war base, from which Uncle Sam can reach out and slap the Japs. A lot of colorful figures in their pockets, the reward of heavy, continuous work. With few ways to indicate at their work stations, they are "fish."

Just about typical of these island-borne workers is 20-year-old, pit-hawaiian Vincent Brady, who recently returned from a project down south. Vincent is a surveyor and dynamiter, he has decorated "paradise" by blasting through thick coral walls cutting ruthless swaths through jungle-thick palm trees to lay out vast fields. He has seen through such blasted waters and he's gained 20 pounds for his all tough work.

Vincent arrived at his south sea, military-secret, island post after a long trip at sea on the "Doris." Vincent is a surveyor and dynamiter, he has decorated "paradise" by blasting through thick coral walls cutting ruthless swaths through jungle-thick palm trees to lay out vast fields. He has seen through such blasted waters and he's gained 20 pounds for his all tough work.

Greeted by Natives

They came in over booming surf in motor launches, to be greeted by natives, some in colorful pareos, others in shorts. Pioneers carried their already set-up their city of tents with wooden floors, and there was a mess-hall and a kitchen. The natives lived in crude huts of woven coconut palm fronds and spoke a south sea dialect unknown to Vincent, who knew only English and Hawaiian.

"Our days started at 7 a. m.," he reports. "Sometimes I'd go out surveying, other days I'd swim out to plant dynamite in the lagoon. I had to swim through plenty of sharks in the lagoon and I am sure that the voters of Idaho will back me up."

And there are almost as many cats, who spend their evenings capturing them. There are also little birds that live in the tall grasses; crabs, blue fellows, that live in trees; funny little blisters that raise a wail on you when they land; body birds that call "dive bombers" because of the way they plunge into the water after fish; large lizards that are always on the alert for the myriads of little flies that populate the island.

Natives Greeted "Man-Birds"

The island had a sort of excitement, when they saw the "man-birds," evidently carried by boat, crutched high above. Luckily, their mission must have been successful. The natives greeted them with a wail and a cheer. Vincent believes. They didn't drop bombs, although they were supposed to. The natives greeted them with a wail and a cheer. Vincent believes. The unsuspicious natives named the "man-birds" "Man-Birds." The natives greeted them with a wail and a cheer. Vincent believes. They didn't drop bombs, although they were supposed to.

An American worker on a south sea island has held up one of the gigantic crabs that scurry about—and often, like this one—end up in the cook-pot.

fish, which the natives caught for themselves and for the hospital patients. There was plenty to eat for all.

Corn Crop Sprouts

The island had already been planted with corn (it appears in four days in that rich soil) and there were beta beans, carrots and even spinach. There are also dairy cattle, ducks, chickens and pigs. At most, all workers had to wear shirts and ties and eat like gentlemen, Vincent says.

Each of them was allotted two cans of beer a day, but no hard liquor. However, Vincent discovered a potent native drink made from coconut milk that the natives sold at a nice profit.

The night life of wine and men, sometimes a fore-lone, would scamper across out tents at night and beat a weird tattoo on the canvas," he says. "There were thousands of them on the island. And there are almost as many cats, who spend their evenings capturing them. sick in bed. The big field house and gymnasium were empty at this hour. I gave for Mrs. Nancy Hale and baby Scooter who lived in the cute "loft" apartment on the far wing. And, too, the papers had carried news of Pop's being in bed. Headlars wouldn't print it; they couldn't call on him in person; why, if—if this—this through warning—

By the tried to think it through, and couldn't. She looked at her watch. Nine-twenty. Forty minutes before Nancy would come down, and—and—did she want to take Nancy Hale into her confidence? She couldn't feel any too cordial to her!

AGAIN THE STRAND
CHAPTER XI

"That's absolutely - childish!" she indignantly reprimanded herself. Of course I must talk with Nancy. We are friends. She's Pepp's right-hand helper now, and she'll probably know all about it. It's just a matter of time before I'm invited. Some kid trick."

She put a weight on the stacked letters and got up to leave the office. She would just back talk to the boss. The letter would not be regarded as intruding, this late in the morning.

Outside she stopped suddenly. There, waving away from her, was that same man!

She couldn't have been mistaken. He had the same hurried manner, the same air of being late, the same coat with upturned collar. A small-statured man who, even from the rear this way, looked a bit stooped. And he was starting up. She was starting up. She was starting up.

Nancy Hilda staidly

A sense of emergency gripped Hythe now. She looked around frantically, she couldn't have said exactly why. After all, there was nothing to be distressed about, nothing tangible. What was wrong with a mere man climbing Mrs. Hale's stairs, here in mid-morning? But instinctively, Hy-the, Hythe advanced. She peered around the corner of the room. Yes, a taxi waited on the street. The driver even had his motor running, she observed. He did not see her.

She turned then and went up to the first landing ever so silently. The man was already rapping on

"Nancy's door. Blahly peeped around the L in the slatway half; it was hazy dark day there, dark and ominous. "Nancy's door opened. "Yes!" the young widow said. Blahly wanted to flash to know she should come. "I got you, Popollion, sister, ready to say said. "Conscience or no conscience or no conscience, I have revealed to you how I see how! The man sounded like a self-gangster. He went on talking. "Nobody seen me come in here yet. Nobody'll see me go out. When I go out, I'll be out. "Who are you?" Nancy demanded. "Nerv mind who I am. That don't matter. I want to know who you are. There was a short pause. "This is Nancy spoke again. "What does that mean?" "He answered in expulsive, hinting tones, too only. "It's for you, sister! A. All for you. 'At's money for you. I want to know who you are. You're faint, ain't you? The papers said so. Okay, here's plenty! "And more where that come from, sister?" "Money!" roared Nancy, bewildered. "Sure! Money for you!" "What's in the world? I don't understand!"

"Easy, see. Nothing to it. Earn it in two hours, maybe one. Easy. We want you to be a home, see. No trouble. No talk or no. Want a little job done, it's all. We'll even show you how."

Fire Stopped at Hill City's Edge

FAIRFIELD, Oct. 26.—For a time last Thursday residents of Hill City feared their town would be totally destroyed by fire, according to reports reaching here.

Fire first started after a permit had been obtained from state officials, got out of control when a heavy wind sprang up.

The fire burned to the very edge of the town before volunteer crews and heavy equipment could bring it under control.

There was only a slight breeze when the fire was set.
